Program

General Counsel are comfortable dealing with all manner of legal issues that may come up in the life of an organization, whether they are corporate, contract, real estate, litigation, employment/personnel, or operational in nature. But what about those emergent matters which seem outside the normal scope? Your CEO calls to tell you that his nephew just got arrested and asks for immediate advice. There is suddenly a significant negative event in the life of a key stakeholder of the organization (whether divorce, death, or disability). You are confronted in the moment with a cutting edge employment/human resources issue for which there is not much established law. The company website is bombarded by impostor and/or spam attacks. An employee speaks loudly and negatively about the company on social media. How will you address these uncommon issues?

Among other matters, this presentation will address the following issues:

- DWI, embezzlement, subpoenas, and kids in trouble
- Divorce, death, or disability of a key stakeholder
- Medical marijuana in the workplace, transgender bathrooms, and impaired employees on the premises
- How to fight impostor websites, phishing, pharming, vishing, and SMishing
- Social media: tools for controlling employee (and ex-employee) speech
- MCAD and EPLI coverage: inside practice tips
